

Dynamics of Human Relationships Culminating Website

The culminating activity requires that you investigate and reflect upon the three major units of study as presented in the course, the self, relationships and rights and responsibilities. You are tasked to create a website in three parts that reflect these topics. You will then present at least one part of the site to the class in an engaging manner. The requirements are as follows.

Part 1: Webpage about Me

- You will create webpage that advertises you.
- This should include a list of your positive attributes, interests and hobbies, things that make you happy, and goals for the future.

Part 2: Describe a Healthy Relationship

- You will reflect upon a healthy relationship in your life and describe that relationship.
- Your description and reflection should include:
 - The type of relationship it is.
 - E.g.: parent-child, sibling, peer, friend
 - The characteristics of this relationship that make it healthy.
 - How this relationship contributes to your well-being.
 - The roles you have in your relationship.

Part 3: My Role in the Community

- You will research an organization that aids the community in some way and present your findings.
- The framework for the research should include:
 - What the organization does for the community.
 - The organization's goals and mission.
 - An explanation of how one can volunteer for the organization, that is, what an individual would do as a volunteer for that organization.
- You will also provide a brief (one page, three paragraphs) reflection that answers the following questions.
 - What rights does the organization promote or try to protect? These could be basic human rights as outlined in laws or policies or things that seem like common sense.
 - How does the organization reflect and individual's responsibilities to his or her community?

Your website should include:

- Images
- A visually appealing organization and layout
- Evidence of effort
- Appropriate and relevant text.

Presentation
